Denison Till
employment law & hr

Denison Till is a leading Yorkshire-based law firm

Denison Till has an established reputation for providing quality training for HR professionals, as well as directors, managers and team leaders who have staffing responsibilities.

The trainers are highly experienced employment solicitors who specialise in regularly advising employers on all areas of employment law.

Training venues have been specifically selected for their convenient locations and excellent service. Our hands-on experience and practical approach to the law, means that delegates leave with knowledge which can immediately be implemented in the workplace.

Courses are also available in-house.

introduction to employment law – full-day training course

The full-day training course “Introduction to employment law” is designed to raise the level of basic knowledge about employment issues, to identify the pitfalls and to encourage a greater understanding of the function and purpose of the HR team. It is interspersed with case studies requiring active participation. To ensure delegates get the most out of the training, the courses are generally limited to 15 attendees. Course materials are comprehensive and fully updated before each session.
